

WOMAN SLEW AS CHURCH BURNS

Mrs. Wills, Alone With Dead at Midnight, Bids Tearful Farewell

QUIT JAIL FOR HOSPITAL

Special Dispatch to Evening Public Ledger
Atlantic City, March 23.—A dramatic scene was enacted early this morning in the undertaking parlors of John L. Garmley, when police and city officials stood with tear-dimmed eyes while Mrs. Marcella Hurley Wills bade farewell to Lewis A. Wills, Jr., her husband, former Philadelphian, whom she killed during a quarrel in their apartment last Saturday.

At noon today Judge Robert Ingersoll signed an order allowing Mrs. Wills to be taken to the hospital for an operation. Her counsel had presented the application and that unless this were done death might result. She will be taken to the hospital this afternoon.

Seeing the widow would break under the ordeal of the public funeral services this afternoon at Pleasantville, the authorities arranged the private farewell that the unfortunate woman might elude the curious crowd.

Because of her delicate condition and the terrible nerve strain she has been under Dr. Mary Townsend, her physician, even hesitated to take the widow to the pier early this morning. But she insisted and became so hysterical that the authorities were afraid a refusal would cause a complete breakdown that might prove fatal. Arrangements therefore, were completed for the trip.

Deepest secrecy was maintained and newspapermen were barred from the little room in the rear of the Garmley establishment. With the exception of the friends who were doing everything possible to aid her, the little woman fought off hysteria that attacked her as midnight, the hour fixed for the funeral. Her friends, who were church she attends, arrived at the city jail at 11:30 o'clock, and with Dr. Townsend, a nurse and Mayor Bader, head of the construction firm of which Wills was superintendent, went to her cell.

Up until the last moment it was feared the situation would take the widow her strength, but under the ministrations of those who gathered about she gradually shook off her nervousness and on the dot of midnight accepted the man who would not let her go. With Dr. Townsend on the other side, they led her to the official coupe in front of headquarters and assisted her inside. Mayor Bader, Dr. Mellon followed in another machine.

Left Alone With the Dead
During the trip Mrs. Wills shook convulsively, but controlled herself by sheer will-power. She was able to walk into the establishment, leaning heavily on Chief Miller's arms, and enter the extreme rear. Mrs. Wills was led to the bed. Those who had come with her remained at her side until they were sure she would not collapse. Then they slipped quietly into an adjacent room and left her alone with her dead.

Newspapermen watched the tense drama through the window with interest in deepest mourning. Mrs. Wills stood with bowed head looking down upon the body for the last time. She remained a moment in this position with her hands clasped in prayer, her mouth a single light above, its glow subdued by a gray shade, witnessed the hard lines of death on the face of the man whose life she had sacrificed to protect herself and the child yet unborn, driven by a mother love that knew but one instinct when the terrible moment came to take the man who had accompanied her. There was no sound in the room except a low moan of suffering.

On Her Knees Beside Coffin
No one will ever know the thoughts that flashed through the overwrought brain of the widow, who shortly is to become a mother. Suddenly Mrs. Wills dropped to her knees, her arms outstretched, touching the cold cheeks of the dead man. The contact seemed to startle her into full realization that she was taking her last farewell. She broke into sobs and sustained her fingers in the collar of the coat about her husband's form.

A second later Mrs. Wills turned appealingly to those who waited. They were quickly in motion, touching the cold cheeks of the dead man. The contact seemed to startle her into full realization that she was taking her last farewell. She broke into sobs and sustained her fingers in the collar of the coat about her husband's form.

Quickly Chief Miller whisked her back to the hall, where Dr. Townsend and the nurse took her in charge. She was on the verge of collapse when they got her in these quarters. Dr. Townsend remained at her side throughout the night.

Mrs. Wills, if her condition permits, will be formally arraigned tomorrow afternoon. The case will go to the Grand jury early next week. Her arrest will be made to secure a quick indictment, probably that of a manslaughter, which will permit of her release under bail, and her return to console her two little daughters.

Wills came to Atlantic City from Philadelphia in 1914 in the employ of Cramp & Co., builders, who were engaged in the erection of the Hotel Traymore. He had been identified with several big local operations and his last job was the construction of a new home for the shore Moose.

Whispers Facts to Logan Pastor, Who Directs Worshipers to Leave

DAMAGE IS SET AT $100,000

"Not a Heroine," Says Girl Who Warned of Fire

Miss Jean Doan, who probably saved the lives of many persons in giving the timely warning, today refused to be classified as a heroine. "I'm not a heroine," she said. "I want to talk about it. See the pastor."

Starting in the midst of a midweek prayer service, fire last night swept through the Holy Trinity Presbyterian Church, Marine and Rockland streets, Logan, causing $100,000 damage.

A panic and possible loss of life was averted by the presence of Miss Jean Doan, 5301 North Thirteenth street. Arriving late for the service, she saw the church ablaze. Quietly approaching the Rev. William Barnes Lower, pastor, who was reading the Scriptures, she whispered to him that the edifice was on fire.

Dr. Lower left the room for a moment, returning, announced: "The church is on fire. Please file out quietly and without disorder."

The eighty men and women gained the street without excitement. Dr. Lower hastened to the basement where fifty young people were holding a rehearsal for a dramatic recital.

Soon a Mass of Flames
By the time all of the young people had left the church the entire rear, where the fire started from a defective fuse, was a mass of flames.

There was a wall had recently been partitioned off for a new parish house, and had been temporarily closed with boards and tar paper.

In less than thirty minutes after the flames had left James had spread through the rear of the building, flames responding to three alarms were caught many times in perilous positions on the walls and roof when the structure threatened to collapse.

In less than an hour after the fire was discovered the balcony had caved in, a mass of wreckage, which spread over the auditorium where the prayer meeting had been in progress.

When the fire finally brought under control only the skeleton walls remained. In their flight from the burning edifice the worshipers carried out the Bible and a score of chairs. Those were the only things saved.

Turn to Saving Homes
The flames had gained such headway when the firemen appeared that they directed their main efforts to safeguarding nearby homes.

At the home of Frederick Smith, at 4833 North Marine street, separated from the church building by a ten-foot alleyway. It was slightly damaged by smoke and water. Twenty automobiles were removed from an adjoining garage.

"I do not think that I deserve any special credit," said Miss Doan today. "I did just what any one else would have done."

Miss Doan is twenty-two years old, a mathematician and a member of Holy Trinity Church.

"I arrived at the church about 8:20 o'clock," she said, "and as I walked down Marine street I saw smoke, but never thought that the church was on fire. Then I heard some boys across the street say: 'It looks like a fire.' I called to the boys to send in an alarm and then went quietly to the pastor and told him that the building was burning."

Helped Some With Wraps
"He told the congregation to get on their wraps in an orderly manner and leave the church quietly. I assisted some of them with their coats and then we tried to save some of the movable things."

"I ran for the Bible, but a man got there first; so I gathered up prayer books. Dr. Lower attempted to rescue the flags, but the fire was spreading so rapidly. The heat was becoming intense."

"In less than three or four minutes after we left the building the entire structure was in flames. It seemed that the fire was eating the building all of a sudden. The engines were late in arriving and when they did come I guess the firemen thought the church was beyond saving and turned their attention to a house in the rear that had taken fire."

The church, which has a congregation of 100, will continue in full service on the same site today. Samuel Wilson, leader of the Men's Bible Class, announced that the 200 members of the class would meet next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in the Logan auditorium, Broad street above Rockland.

Appears for Trial; Nabbed in $90,000 Silk Robbery
Charles Richardson Long Sought for N. J. Hold-up Last Summer
Detectives arrested Charles Richardson, 1608 North Front street, as he entered the door of Judge Ferguson's court in the city Hall today in connection with a $90,000 silk robbery at Metuchen, N. J., last summer. He was held without bail by Magistrate Coward to await extradition.

The arrest ended a long wait by Detectives Hens and Boyle, who had stood at the court door three times in the expectation of catching Richardson. He appeared in court for trial on a charge of swindling John B. Ellison & Sons, 24 South Sixth street, by presenting a false order for $2000 worth of cloth. A van containing $90,000 worth of silk, en route from Marcus Hook to New York, was held up at Metuchen July 2. Six men were arrested at that time.

Miss Jean Doan (insert), 5301 North Thirteenth street, probably averted a disastrous panic among worshipers at a prayer meeting in Holy Trinity Presbyterian Church, Logan. She coolly walked down the aisle and whispered to the pastor, Dr. William Barnes Lower (insert), that the edifice was on fire. He notified the audience, which quietly filed out. Damage to the church is estimated at $100,000.

Chinese Official Probes Shooting
Reading, Pa., March 23.—Acting at the instance of relatives, Moy Kee, of the Chinese Embassy in Washington, was here to investigate the shooting of Gen. Hooy, a Chinese high school student, killed by Robert Flower, sixteen years old, after Boy Scout target practice some months ago. Flower was tried in Juvenile Court here this week. Difficulty in getting at the real story of the shooting started the investigations. It was at first said the boy had shot himself.

USE MACHINE GUNS ON ULSTER BORDER

Free State Snipers Not Content With Rifle Firing, Belfast Is Told

ANOTHER CONSTABLE SLAIN

By the Associated Press
Belfast, March 23.—Reports that the snipers on the southern side of the Ulster border were using machine guns against reconnoitering parties reached Belfast today. All day yesterday snipers were active with rifles, firing intermittently until a late hour in the sector between Aughanbeg and Caledon.

In Belfast two constables were shot at noon on May street by a band, the members of which made their escape. One of the constables was killed and the other was mortally wounded. The military are combing the locality for the assassins.

According to Fernmanagh reports, all road traffic on the Free State side of the border in that vicinity has been suspended. Farmers seeking to sell cattle and horses are being forced to offer them below pre-war prices.

John Murdock, twenty years old, was halted by armed men in Falls road today and shot in the stomach. His assailants escaped. The home of a constable in the Brillford district, southwest of Tyrone, was attacked last night by armed raiders, and his brother was killed.

Special Wireless Dispatch, Copyright 1923
London, March 23.—Winston Churchill stated in the House of Commons yesterday he had received telegrams from Sir James Craig, Premier of Northern Ireland, and the Government regarding the recent raids. Both make violent accusations and counter-accusations against each other.

Undoubtedly the situation on the frontier is very lamentable and disquieting," said Mr. Churchill. "I trust that any one who has any influence will use it in the direction of quieting the situation. The whole question of the measures to be taken to control the border must be reviewed at an early date by His Majesty's Government."

It is more important than that a meeting should take place between the representatives of the North and South. Considering the way things are going from bad to worse, any question of the border is an obstacle in the way of such a meeting will be assuming a grave responsibility."

Answering a question as to whether he realized that a state of civil war existed in Ireland, Mr. Churchill said: "I do not consider it nearly as bad as that."

Deaths of a Day
HENRY A. LAUGHLIN
Had Helped to Make Native City, Pittsburgh, Famous in Industry

Henry Alexander Laughlin, a pioneer in the steel industry of America and a director of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Company, died last night in Chestnut Hill.

Mr. Laughlin was eighty-three years old. He was born in Pittsburgh December 12, 1858, and was one of the men who helped make this city a great iron and steel center. Services will be conducted at his residence this afternoon, after which the body will be taken to Pittsburgh for interment.

Mr. Laughlin was a member of the Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, the Duguesne Club, of Pittsburgh; the New York Yacht Club, and the Art Club, of this city. In 1890 he married Alice B. Denniston, of Pittsburgh, who died in 1872. In 1870 Mr. Laughlin married Mary B. Reed, of Washington, Pa., who died in 1901. Two children by his first marriage are living, James B. Laughlin, of Pittsburgh, and Anne Irwin Laughlin, of Philadelphia. Another son, the late Edward Reed Laughlin, died in 1900. Five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren also survive him.

ON ITS FALLOUT AT RICKARD TRIAL

Ratification Is Expected Tomorrow With One Reservation, Favored by Harding

VOTE MAY START TONIGHT

By the Associated Press
Washington, March 23.—What was expected to be the final grand debate on the Pacific Treaty began in the Senate today, with Administration leaders holding their lines intact against the onslaughts of the opposition. Predicting ratification would be voted tomorrow, with no reservation, except that approved by the Foreign Relations Committee and accepted by President Harding.

Enough votes were pledged, the leaders said, to reject all other proposed reservations and amendments and to insure the necessary two-thirds for final ratification.

The ratification vote is to be taken at the outset of tomorrow's session, under the unanimous consent agreement, which limited debate today to one hour for each Senator and stipulated that discussion shall end entirely with today's adjournment.

Another series of prepared addresses were delivered at the outset of the session, which began an hour earlier than usual, to give an opportunity to all those who desired to speak.

Voting Expected Before Night
It was the expectation of the leaders that votes on several of the pending reservations would be taken before night.

The debate was opened by Senator Colt, Republican, Rhode Island, who favored ratification with the committee "no alliance" reservation, framed by Senator Brandegee, Republican, Connecticut, at a conference with President Harding.

Senator Colt said that in his opinion the treaty without the reservation would impose a "moral obligation" to use force.

The Brandegee reservation provides that the treaty does not commit the United States to armed force, nor to any alliance or obligation to join in defense of other belligerents.

Urges the Safe Way
Replying to criticisms that the treaty would involve the United States in Far Eastern questions, the Rhode Island Senator argued that the quarrels of other nations in the Pacific "inevitably would involve the peace and security of the United States," whether there is a treaty or not.

The safe way, he said, would be to take a position where it would be possible to aid in amicable adjustment of such questions.

There is clearly no contractual obligation to go to war," said Senator Colt. "But I cannot resist the conclusion that there is an implied moral obligation to use armed force if it is found necessary to meet the exigencies of the particular situation."

"I believe the Brandegee reservation should be adopted, thus making it perfectly certain that the treaty involves no commitment by the United States to the use of armed force."

EARTH TREMORS IN SIX STATES IN MIDDLE WEST

"Weak Spots" in Firmament Cause Buildings to Shake

St. Louis, March 23.—(By A. P.)—Seismologists at St. Louis University today ascribed "weak spots" in the firmament causing Mother Earth to tremble in parts of six States surrounding St. Louis late yesterday.

The earth tremors radiated 150 to 200 miles southeastward from here, and were reported as far south as Troy, Tenn., and Hickman, Ky., and as far east as Evansville, Ind., according to reports received here from the affected areas, which included ordered Arkansas, Southeastern Missouri and Southern Illinois.

Shaking buildings and homes for from twelve to eighteen minutes, the shocks were described as severe and at times violent by observers and attendants of the seismograph.

Only slight damage, consisting mainly of falling chimneys and plaster, was caused by the tremors, which rattled chinaware and dislodged pictures and ornaments from their places.

Child of Twelve Committed Burglary and Forged Checks

OFTEN OUT LATE AT NIGHT

By the Associated Press
New York, March 23.—Twelve-year-old Nellie Gasko, chief corroborating witness for the State in the trial of Tex Rickard, sports promoter, charged with criminal assault upon Sarah Schomfeld, fifteen, admitted under cross-examination of Rickard's counsel today that she had forged checks and committed a burglary.

She also admitted having lied to police officers in the past, and also testified that her father had picked her up at various times.

The child was the first to take the stand. Quietly and without a sign of emotion she answered questions concerning her past, and also testified that her father had friends among sailors who had asked her to visit the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Her admissions included statements that she had been placed on probation on a charge of absenting herself from school and being a troublesome and untruthful child.

That she had picked up a letter addressed to her employer containing a check for $50, and had indorsed his name to it and cashed it.

That she had at another time forced a desk and taken postage stamps from the office of Julius Berline, connected with a cement company, she had noticed in his checkbook, taken three checks, made them out for various sums to the order of a person who did not exist, signed Berline's name to the checks, added the indorsement of the non-existent person and cashed them.

That she had been arrested behind a bathtub in a house she had entered on Berline's name to the checks, and that she had taken some Jewish war relief money, but had not touched a child's bank.
